That the Central Valley water plan will not be likely to receive federal aid, due to the fact that California projects have already been allotted more than its share of public works funds, was the thought that we dwelt upon in concluding last week's arguments against the scheme. Subsequent press reports bear out this phase of our diatribe; and without federal aid, the plan assumes a hopelessly impossible mien. However, we'll point out, if we may, a few more reasons why the Central Valley water plan is liable to become a pain in the necks of California taxpayers.

Section 18 of the proposed law empowers the "Authority" to issue revenue bonds in a sum not to exceed 170 million dollars, and also provides that the aggregate amount of such bonds shall be reduced "by such an amount as may be appropriated and made available out of the treasury of the state of California in aid of the construction of said project or any unit thereof." This passage clearly indicates that taxpayers, contrary to the assurance of water plan proponents, may find themselves participating to no little extent in paying for the works. Else why does the law specifically provide that the aggregate amount of the bond shall be reduced by appropriation from the state treasury?

There are many indicators in this and the succeeding section, all pointing to the ultimate gouging of the taxpayer. For while the law provides that the bonds shall constitute obligations only of the authority, another section of the law says that the bonds shall be bonds of the state of California. Regardless of where politicians seek to place the responsibility of the bonds' redemption, the state will be the goat in the final reckoning. When the project fails to liquidate itself, as it almost certainly will, irate bondholders will demand that the state of California do something about it. No court would be able to overlook the state's responsibility, and the spoilers would at last have succeeded in fastening the burden upon the taxpayers of California. A dreary prospect indeed, for residents of a state second only to New York in its present bonded indebtedness.

There follows a group of questions and answers which it might be a good idea to look over:

Q. What basis is there for the statement that these water bonds are self-liquidating and will not cost the taxpayers a cent?

A. No basis whatever. With farmers unable to sell their crops and irrigating districts defaulting, how can another irrigating project succeed and pay its own way?

Q. If money is taken out of the state treasury to start this work, who pays for it?

A. The taxpayer, through sales tax, gasoline tax, or any other tax which furnishes money to the treasury.

Q. Has the project promise of Federal aid?

A. No. Neither direct nor implied.

Q. Can this project be built for $170,000,000?

A. The old Marshall plan from which this is copied, was estimated to cost $385,000,000.

Q. Is there any guarantee that water from the Sacramento valley can be taken to Tulare and Kings counties for irrigation purposes?

A. No. Several irrigating districts in this state have attempted to take water from one watershed to another and have been stopped by court injunction. Their ditches

Federal-Financed Work to Commence Here Immediately

The start of federal-financed work will start in this county immediately, according to word received by Herbert Shadle today from Supervisor Joe McKinnon. In a message to all town heads, such as mayors, chamber of commerce presidents, etc., the supervisors invited suggestions on the best way to spend the federal allotment in order to do the most good to the greatest number.

Accordingly, it has been decided to spend the money on hand labor, which can be utilized for such purposes as cleaning out the Los Gatos creek bed near here, a project suggested by Mr. Shadle.

Applicants for this and other county work are requested to make application to Mr. Shadle, and it is presumed that work will be given out in order, preferably to heads of families, or young men over the age of 16, who are helping to maintain dependents.

GUILD LADIES ENJOY LUNCH AT MRS. YOUNG'S

The members of Group 1 of the Congregational guild participated in a delightful luncheon last week at the beautiful country home of Mrs. Henry Young on Budd avennue.

The company was seated at two long tables spread in the dining room, attractive with white linen, china and silver, and centered with bowls of winter iris. Quantities of chrysanthemums from the gardens of Robert Scholz graced the spacious living room to which the ladies adjourned for a business and social hour.

A magnificent hooked rug, the "Tree of Life" pattern, of which Mrs. Young has made a wall hanging, elicited many compliments. Others of these attractive rugs, for which Mrs. Young is widely known, were also admired.

During the business session the group decided to meet on Thursday, Dec. 7, at the home of Mrs. George Griffin, North First street, and to hold a food sale the following Saturday, Dec. 9, at Field's store.

Basketball Teams Successful In Two Recent Tourneys

Meagre reports from the high school reveals the fact that local hoopsters won both the 110 and 120 -pound games from Fremont there Friday night; that the same teams yesterday afternoon defeated Los Gatos here by a comfortable margin; that a good game is expected when Coach Noddin's boys mix it with Live Oak there Friday. No scores were available.

Win Golf Match

Justice John D. Blaine and his son, Frank won a "father and son" golf tourney at Rinconada Sunday. Runners up were E. Loftus and son, Reginald, of Los Gatos. Both young men shot 78s, Mr. Loftus an 89, and Judge Blaine a deciding 84.

"A Feast of Fiction And Fact, Bill At Local Club Meeting

Several items of business occupied the attention of the members of the Country Woman's club at its meeting Monday. It was voted to make the usual gift to the Christmas fund for the veterans in the Palo Alto hospital, and the collection of things for the Christmas boxes for the local welfare work.

Mrs. Louis Shelley presented the proposal of the C. U. H. S. trustees that they ask for funds from the government for the construction of a much-needed new high school building.

All present voted that they went on record as favoring the plan.

The committee for the afternoon's program had suffered the loss of two of its members, and the chairman, Mrs. E. R. Kennedy, was ill with the flu, but everything had been so well planned and prepared that it passed off very smoothly and was a decided success.

The committee had modified the subject, "Literary Feast," to "A Feast of Fiction and Fact."

Mrs. Kennedy's paper was like a grape vine from which depended luscious fruit. She began by calling to attention the feasts of earlier days, by a short reading from Washington Irving's "Sleepy Hollow." This was followed by an excerpt from Mark Twain's "A Tramp Abroad," in which he wrote of the home foods which he found wanting in Europe.

Mrs. Lilian Voge, who presented her mother's items of the program, then read "Old Time Thanksgiving" from "Old Town Folks" by Harriet Beecher Stowe. This also detailed the prodigious 'eats' which our forefathers thought essential to proper celebration of our national holiday.

In contrast to this a modern menu was presented, with its various items fittingly described, some by fact and some by fiction.

Several salad greens were named and the preparation of gelatine outlined, the history of bread-making was told, and the crowning feature of the course was depicted by a story selected by the late Mrs. Shaw, "Budget's Thanksgiving Turkey," by Hayden Carruth. Cranberry sauce and coffee were also presented by Mrs. Voge, and the plum pudding by a selection from Dickens' "Christmas Carol" which Mrs. Weyland Morgan read.

Our sweet potatoes come from the south, and in the words of Mrs. Kennedy, "—for the full flavor of these you will be transported on wings of song to the sunny south." Mrs. J. D. Blaine sang two negro spirituals, "Massa Dear" and "O Mary, Don't You Weep." Mrs. H. M. Shadle sang two southern airs, "Tom Big-Bee River" and "Carry Me Back to Old Virginny." Mrs. G. S. Robson accompanied the singers, and sang the chorus of the last number with Mrs. Shadle.

The concluding item of the menu was cheese, told about in a little paper prepared by Mrs. Shaw. A charming short story by O. Henry, "Two Thanksgiving Day Gentlemen," which Mrs. Kennedy had selected as a happy aftermath to the dinner, was omitted on account of lack of time.

Mrs. H. C. Smith substituted for the chairman.

Beautiful bouquets of chrysanthemums both large and small, from the gardens of the chairman and Robert Scholz, which Mrs. R. H. Hyde had assisted Mrs. Shadle in arranging, were greatly admired.

CAMPBELL LAYS NO CLAIM TO T.H. THURMOND

T. H. Thurmond, self-confessed co-kidnapper and slayer of Brooke Hart, contrary to reports of the daily press all over the state, is not, by the wildest stretch of the imagination, a "Campbell man."

Deluged with queries about the person of Thurmond, the Press has sought to find the thread that ties him to Campbell. It seems that he worked in a local cannery for a brief period several years ago, and that his family at present lives on Leigh avenue, and that the self-confessed slayer had recently been living with them. Up to that time, however, he had lived in San Jose, and was unknown in this town.

LOCAL BALL CLUB TAKES TRIMMING HERE SUNDAY AFT

By Hal DeFraga

Sunday the Richmond-Chase ball team won the first half title of the Inter-City league when they defeated Campbell here 8 to 1. No alibis are offered by Campbell for losing the game; their opponents were the better team Sunday.

Quain was unable to last through the first inning, and had to be relieved by Jung, who pitched pretty good ball, but was hit hard by the Chase sluggers.

Joe Starsi, who pitched for the winners, was complete master in the box. He had the Campbell batters at his mercy and allowed only seven scattered singles, no two coming in any one inning except the eighth, when Tucker and Lathrop singled in succession.

Campbell's lone tally came in the sixth when Tucker got to second on an error, and scored on a single by Atkinson.

Richmond-Chase got to Quain for four runs with only one out in the first inning. Jung came to the mound and retired the side on two pitched balls. Jung held the canners scoreless until the fourth, when Joaquin hit a home run. This was the only run scored until the ninth, when the Chasers tallied three times on home runs by Battaglia, Carlo, and an error by Clark.

Funeral Services For Wesley Rice Held In Los Gatos

Many friends gathered Saturday afternoon at the Place funeral home in Los Gatos to participate in the last rites for Wesley Ernest Rice, eight-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Gregory Rice, North Central avenue.

Wesley passed away Thursday night at O'Connor's, the result of injuries sustained Sunday, Nov. 5, when a heavy orchard drag fell on him while playing at the home of his grandparents, Judge and Mrs. W. A. Rice of Saratoga.

The Rev. J. H. Bennett conducted services for the lad who had been a member of the Sunday school at his church. Music was offered by a quartet composed of Mrs. Worthin Grattan, Miss Evelyn James, Harry C. Smith, and Dr. W. I. Merrill, with Mrs. Dave Sanders at the piano. Pall-bearers were Harold Shelley, Jack Murdock, Roy Kossich, and Abe Klausen. Interment took place at Madrona cemetery.

The lad is survived, in the immediate family, by his parents and a brother, Donald.

RESOLUTION IS MISQUOTED IN SAN JOSE PAPER

At a meeting of Orchard City grange last week there was passed a resolution which, as appearing in the San Jose daily morning paper, was somewhat garbled and misleading. The resolution in question, as it appeared in the morning paper, put the grange on record as favoring a "bond issue for a new high school."

As it was passed, however, the resolution, offered by M. E. Purmort and approved by the grange, said, " . . . that Orchard City grange go on record in favor of school board to make application for federal loan for the high school," meaning, of course, that the grange would approve efforts of the trustees to secure federal aid for a much-needed high school.

The grange wishes to make clear that it is unalterably opposed to a bond issue for this purpose at this time.

LOCAL CHURCH WILL CELEBRATE 'THANKS' SUNDAY

Next Sunday morning Thanksgiving worship will be held at the Congregational church, starting with a brief Sunday school period at 10:30.

At 11 o'clock parents and friends will join the young folks in a "Family Worship," at which time services for young and old alike will be held. Special music has been arranged for this service.

The church will be beautifully decorated with fruit, flowers, vegetables, etc., in the harvest motif, by the young people of the church under the direction of Miss Dorothy Merriman. Donations of decorative material will be appreciated.

The public is cordially invited to attend.

The FARMERS CORNER

by RALPH H. TAYLOR

Executive Secretary Agricultural Council of California

The California farmer, whose traditional job is to spread Thanksgiving day cheer in California homes by providing the birds and the "fixings," can well afford, this year, to take time off for personal thanksgiving.

Most of the farmer's blessings, to be sure, are still more promised than real—and no one would attempt to minimize the desperate fight to survive which is now being waged on many California farms.

But there is, nontheless, definite hope and definite promise of better days ahead for agriculture as a whole.

One good reason for thanksgiving, for example, is that the federal government was able—and willing—to step in, when private avenues of financing were closed to the farmer, and assist, not only in capital financing, but in production loans and marketing loans.

Except for that timely assistance, thousands of additional farmers would have been forced to the wall and denied any chance of saving their farms.

Most vital of all, in a broad-gauged view of the agricultural situation, is the fact that President Roosevelt and the national administration are making a real attempt to restore farm prices and place agriculture on a parity with business and industry.

Only a pre-war parity is sought, it is true, but even that, if it is accomplished, will be a vast improvement over the demoralized conditions which have obtained in recent years.

The objective of the national administration, a tremendous cause for farm thanksgiving, is to lift the purchasing power of the farmer's dollar to an equality with the purchasing power of the industrial dollar. Due to generally disturbed economic conditions, plus overproduction, the farmer's purchasing power has been continuously below, often one-half of it, normal since 1921.

From 1924 to 1929, California—and other American—cities generally seemed to prosper without a prosperous agriculture—and, to be frank, without any special concern as to the condition of agriculture. It was an unnatural situation and one headed for an inevitable reckoning. During this period virtually all of the farmer's resources were exhausted in "carrying on," with the result that agriculture entered the depression under a terrific handicap as compared with business and industry.

But today, there is a general realization—a little belated but exceedingly heartening—that recovery in the cities, on any sound basis, must be accompanied by recovery on the farm. That, in itself, is something real and something vital to be thankful for.

As a result of this new appreciation of the omportance of agriculture in the economic set-up, and as a result also of the federal government's sincere desire to help the entire country back to solid ground, definite steps are being taken to restore farm buying power.

Three major steps in this program are:

1. Cutting down production of staple commodities through acreage reductions, chiefly in wheat, cotton and corn.

2. Reduction of interest and "incidental charges" in farm loans—items which formerly broke the backs of thousands of farmers.

3. The drive of the NRA to restore all industries, thereby making a market for farm products.

Intangible as these benefits may seem to the individual farmer struggling for survival, they will nontheless bring tangible results to millions of farmers.

And the California farmer, hard-hit though he may be, has this added thing to be thankful for—that his ability to diversify his crops has made his plight less serious than that of farmers in the nation generally. California farmers, during the last three years, have shown a greater ability to adjust themselves to new conditions than the farmers of any other area in the nation—and thereby a better ability to hold on and survive the storm.

All in all, California agriculture has real reason for Thanksgiving. And next year it might even have something to celebrate with.

KIWANIS NOTES By Heck

Gold, deflation, inflation, and fluctuation, or what will you, was very interestingly described by Dr. W. H. Poytress, social science department, state college, yesterday at Kiwanis luncheon. As Sambo says, "Dat is why de fix we is in."

The value of gold per ounce was fixed in the United States half a century ago at $20.76, and has not been changed until recently, said the speaker. It has climbed to $33.76 per ounce today. Dr. Poytress declared that rise in prices by speculation is not sound.

Business and banks will not invest for any length of time with the dollar so uncertain.

So many factors enter into the making and stabilizing of prices of commodities that the opinions of experts vary as to the methods of recovery.

One of the big things in President Roosevelt's recovery campaign has been the fact that he has called in experts on economics who have such different and even opposite views on the proper methods of procedure.

The matter of asking for a government loan to build a new high school was presented by the the high school board. To ascertain the attitude of the people of the district the proposition will be presented to all organizations and groups in the community. The Kiwanis membership voted unanimously for the project.

Monday evening the club directors will meet.

Carl Field will tell of his trip east, and Ben Curry will be chairman next Tuesday.

JOHNSON BLAMES GOVERNOR FOR DEPLETED FUNDS

Sacramento, Nov. 22—Efforts of Governor Rolph and other administration spokesmen to toss the blame for California's present financial plight on the doorstep of the 1933 legislature were roundly scored here today by State Treasurer C. G. Johnson, as the state began the registration of warrants gecause of the depleted treasury.

"Nobody can rightfully say that our legislators are responsible for our present financial insolvency," said Johnson. "That responsibility rests with the Rolph administration alone. Had the governor and his advisors heeded the warning they were given more than two years ago the state of California today would not be compelled to pay off its obligations in interest-bearing I.O.U's. that will cost the taxpayers another half million dollars before they are redeemed next August.

"More than two years ago Governor Rolph and his advisors were warned that the state's income was shrinking rapidly. They were warned that unless a halt were called to their spendthrift management, the state's surplus of $30,000,000 would be entirely dissipated within less than two years and that the state would be millions of dollars in debt.

"But Governor Rolph and his financial advisors laughed at these warnings. Boldly and brazenly they assured the taxpayers that the treasury would not be depleted. And their orgy of spending of the taxpayers' money continued with increasing fervor.

"Today the state is insolvent. So critical has become the situation that State Controller Ray L. Riley, one of the keenest minds in state government, was compelled to demand that I register all state warrants drawn on the general fund. We are in debt some $30,000,000 with no hope of immediate relief in sight.

"It was just such a situation that faced our legislators when they convened in Sacramento early this year. They knew that a financial crisis impended. Their first step was to halt, insofar as possible, the reckless expenditure of state funds. The budget was trimmed by many millions of dollars.

"The legislators knew that the taxpayers had more than reached the limit of their indebtedness. They knew that tax strikes would result if efforts were made to saddle additional taxes on the shoulders of those who already were sharing more than they could burden. But the legislators likewise knew it was a hopeless to ask the Rolph administration to halt its reckless expenditure of tax moneys. They knew a crisis had to be met, and they are deserving of credit for their efforts to stop this flow of public money through the fingers of inexperienced and incompetent administration.

"Even today there is before the courts of the state a legal action brought by the governor's director of finance, seeking to compel State Controller Ray Riley to permit the expenditure by this beaurocratic government of $500,000 more than was budgeted by the legislature. It is nothing more than an arrogant gesture on the part of the entrenched beaurocrats to drain the public purse to the last penny."

UNEMPLOYED RESOLVE AGAINST STATE WATER ACT

Oakland, Oct. 22—Opposition to the 170 million dollar state water project was set forth in resolutions passed recently by the East of the Lake Unemployment club here, the second-largest unemployment council in California.

It was the concurrence of the meeting that if the federal government in northern California, local projects are favored as more beneficial to the worker and to the local merchant.

This unemployed club of cooperative non-salaried workers organized for relief and aid of those in distress asks their members and friends to vote against the state water bond act on Dec. 19. The resolution follows:

WHEREAS, on Dec. 19, the people of California will vote on the proposed $170,000,000 state water act, and,

WHEREAS, Public Works Administrator Ickes is quoted in the Oakland Tribune and San Francisco Examiner on Nov. 12, 1933 as stating that California will not be given any more funds at present as we had been given more than our allotment, and,

WHEREAS, the state water act, jects such as the Broadway tunel, if it carries, will hold up local pro- and,

WHEREAS, local projects will give our citizens work at home and enable them to spend their wages with local merchants and for the benefit of their families, and,

WHEREAS, the state water project will give no work except in which the menmust live in camps, spend the bulk of their pay for food and bunks and have little, if any, left for the support of their families:

Therefore be it RESOLVED: That this organization goes on record as being against the state water act being carried out at this time and asks their members and friends to vote against it, and,

Be it further resolved: That a copy of this resolution be sent to the press.

Adopted at regular meeting of Nov. 13, 1933.

And now we've had our say. It's up to you, Mr. and Mrs. Voter, to decide whether or not you want to lay the practically defunct California state treasury open to further raids.

We would suggest, in conclusion, that districts which are desperately in need of water with which to irrigate lands already in production, outline a local solution, even as we of the Santa Clara valley are seeking to do. The cost will then be borne by those participating in the benefits thereof, and if the load is to be borne solely by the benefitted district, it's a cinch that the cost will be held down to the lowest figure compatible with necessity. Isn't that right?

A word about the Hart kidnapping and murder case. The brutish ferocity of the young men who, by their own confessions, carried off and killed in a cold-blooded and cowardly manner an inoffensive young man, Brooke Hart, blots out completely the cloud of compassion that ordinarily hovers 'round young criminals who come of good families.

In the annals of California crime are few cases which for downright beastiality can compare with the current sensation. That the perpetrators of the deed escape with anything less than life imprisonment, without recourse to parole, is unthinkable.

There is some question as to whether the young fiends will be tried for murder in San Mateo county, or for kidnapping in Santa Clara county. In the former case these creatures might get off with life imprisonment; even escape by the parole route in seven years. In Santa Clara county, however, facing a kidnapping charge, they would almost certainly get what they so nonchalantly dealt out to Brooke Hart—death. So let's have the trial here.

Scott's Emulsion of Cod Liver Oil will supply them quickly. A tablespoonful contains more nourishing and disease-resisting vitamin A than a quart of milk. It is also rich in bone-building vitamin D.

Scott's Emulsion has been famous for sixty years—and it is better today than ever. Pure; easily digested—nothing to harm the most delicate stomach; easy to take—children love it. Give it to them regularly and watch them grow. All druggists—60c and $1.20.
